Fr. Paul writes:-

The two celebrations in this coming week at the start of the month of November - Thursday, All Saints and Friday, All Souls - invite us to reflect on deeper dimensions of our lives (the call to holiness) and our destiny (the fulfilment of our lives in the glory of God in heaven). Neither should leave us worried or fretful.

All Saints is the celebration of people like ourselves who lived the stresses, strains and the wonders of life on earth. They were sinners who struggled with failings and weaknesses. They came to know and realise God's love for them as sinners and that the call to holiness was the means through which they had come to know their need for God and their need to rely on his grace and love in order to experience true peace in their daily lives. We should look to them as companions on our journey of faith and people who can help us along the way to persevere and to trust in God's promises.

All Souls brings to mind a reality we must all face and experience—our death. But not to see this fearfully but to see it as the means of reaching the fulfilment of all that we are called to. We all have family and friends who have gone before us and it is our special task to remember them in prayer, knowing too that when our time comes we will likewise be supported by the prayer and love of the Church.
