Fr. Paul writes: At St. Gregory's we are lucky to have our small garden of remembrance for those whose ashes have been buried there. We are also very lucky to have a parishioner who keeps an eye on its tidiness and order. We feel it's time to give the railings a fresh coat of paint and we were wondering whether the families of those whose ashes have been interred might like to contribute to the costs. After all, in most cemeteries and memorial gardens there is usually an annual maintenance fee. If you would like to make a contribution just put it into an envelope marking it "Garden of Remembrance" and either post it into the inner box in the presbytery doorway or give it to Gillian in her office. The Garden of Remembrance is a shared facility for those from our parish community who have died. Families who wish to mark that the ashes of their loved one(s) are buried there are invited to have their name(s) recorded on special plaques on the wall. These can be ordered through Gillian. This will leave the Garden itself a space with order and beauty. In recent months some spaces have become little shrines to individuals. I completely understand people's desire to mark spots - these could be indicated by very small plants but I would respectfully ask families not to place pictures/photos/crosses/stones in the garden itself and if they so wish, to have a plaque on the wall put up. Please speak to me if you are troubled, worried or distressed by my words.
